The Alliance for Safe Online Pharmacies, Federation of State Medical Boards Release Free Continuing Education Program for Pharmacists and Physicians

(Washington, D.C., January 23, 2015) – The Alliance for Safe Online Pharmacies (ASOP) and the Federation of State Medical Boards (FSMB) announce the availability of a free online continuing education program (CME/CPE), entitled “Internet Drug Sellers: What Providers Need To Know,” for pharmacists and physicians focused on the growing problem of illegal online drug sales. Recent studies found that nearly 97% of online drug sellers are operating illegally, and one in two websites selling medicine online peddle counterfeit drugs.

The CME/CPE is designed to educate providers about the dangers of purchasing pharmaceuticals online from an unverified source, and offer tools to help keep patients safe. This resource is being released at a time when consumers are increasingly using the Internet to buy goods and services. The convenience and potential savings of online drug markets lure consumers into buying medicines online, but all too often buyers are unaware of the personal health, financial and fraud risks.

This free CME/CPE offers providers the information necessary to protect patients from illegal online drug sales.

“Doctors and pharmacists are the front line of defense for patient safety. ASOP is pleased to provide these tools so patients are less likely to be victimized online,” said Libby Baney, Executive Director, ASOP.

“Many people do not realize that obtaining drugs over the Internet can be dangerous,” said Dr. Humayun Chaudhry, President and CEO, FSMB. “We are very pleased to partner with the ASOP on this important initiative to protect patients by educating providers about the dangers of purchasing pharmaceuticals online from an unverified source.”
