NM	Telemedicine License	Medical Board: A limited medical license that allows a physician located outside New Mexico to practice medicine on patients located in New Mexico. Each applicant for a telemedicine license must be of good moral character and hold a full and unrestricted license to practice medicine in another state or territory of the United States. Required documentation: • A completed signed application, with a passport quality photo taken within six months. Applications are valid for one year from the date of receipt. • Verification of licensure in all states where the applicant holds or has held a license to practice medicine, or other health care profession. Verification must be received directly from the other state(s) board, and must attest to the status, issue date, license number, and other information requested and contained on the form. • Applicants who have had previous disciplinary or other action against them may be required to meet with the entire board. The board may, in its discretion, issue a license to practice medicine across state lines if it finds that the previous disciplinary or other action does not indicate that the physician is a potential threat to the public. • Licensure process. Upon receipt of a completed application, including all required documentation and fees, board staff will request and review an AMA physician profile and FSMB board action databank search. When the application is complete a member or agent of the board will review and may approve the application. A personal interview is not required unless there is a discrepancy in the application that cannot be resolved. • Initial license expiration. Telemedicine licenses shall be renewed on July 1 following the date of issue. Initial licenses are valid for a period of not more than thirteen months or less than one month. Osteopathic Board: The Board of Osteopathic medicine offers a limited telemedicine license that allows an osteopathic physician located outside New Mexico to practice osteopathic medicine on patients located in New Mexico. 	Licensure/ Consultation exception	Virginia licensure requirements do not apply to: • Consultations: Any legally qualified out-of-state or foreign practitioner may consult with a practitioner licensed in the state... There must be regular communication between the consultant and the Virginia practitioner while the consultation/care is being provided. • Audio-only telephone, electronic mail message, facsimile transmission, or online questionnaire, which are not defined as "telemedicine" ○ The Board believes that these communications do not constitute telemedicine, and therefore do not require licensure, when used in the follow-up care of a Virginia resident with whom a bona fide practitioner-patient relationship has been previously established. The establishment of a new practitioner-patient relationship requires a Virginia license and must comport with the requirements for telemedicine found in § 54.1-3303 of the Code of Virginia. For behavior health practitioners: Any doctor of medicine or osteopathy, physician assistant, or nurse practitioner who would otherwise be subject to licensure by the Board who holds an active, unrestricted license in another state, the District of Columbia, or a United States territory or possession and who is in good standing with the applicable regulatory agency in that state... [may provide] behavioral health services to a patient located in the Commonwealth in accordance with the standard of care when i. such practice is for the purpose of providing continuity of care through the use of telemedicine services; ii. the practitioner has previously established a practitioner-patient relationship with the patient and has performed an in-person evaluation; may provide such services for a period of no more than one year from the date on which the practitioner began providing such services... 		Additionally, the WMC does not require a license when a patient seeks a second opinion or a consultation with a specialist out of state, such as a cancer center, and sends medical records to the specialist to review and provide input on treatment. In this case, the specialist in the distant state does not need a license to practice medicine in Washington to review the records and provide an opinion, but not treatment, regarding the patient's care. Another common situation that is not specifically addressed by a statutory exemption is when a patient with an established relationship with a practitioner licensed in another state crosses the border into Washington and requires medical care. In some cases, permitting the physician in the patient's home state to provide temporary continuous care is in the patient's best interest. So long as the out-of-state practitioner provides temporary continuity of care to the patient, the practitioner would not require a Washington license.		Policy (July 2022)
